

MOURNING UPON THE CAPE

Thunder melody like that of a shell
cries out from the shore's cliffs.

The clouds confine, collide,
prisoners bathed in illumination
in lightning without sky.

It is no kind of love,
but a flower given in mourning.

To touch the heart without feeling is to jump from the cliffs
just short of the sea.

—Timothy Giles