Editors' Statement

Cornfield Review began 19 years ago in an effort to give Ohio State Marion a literary tradition. And it did just that, publishing works from writers across the nation alongside works of art and literature submitted by students on this campus.

But 1995 was to be different. As the campus that sponsored CR grew and expanded its resources, the journal looked inward for writers and artists, harvesting a homegrown crop of talent. This issue is a compilation of work by OSU and MTC students plus poetry from a talented group of students who entered our First High School Poetry Contest.

The stories on these pages draw the reader on a journey through the human experience. Beginning the journey with the lessons of childhood, we move through the conflicts of midlife, to the resolution of later life.

For his work on our High School Poetry Contest, the Editors wish to extend a special thanks to David Citino.
