

Gray

Kate Hageman

Gray

Purity with a mixture of hatred

So calm, yet deathly

Two colors so different but still joined together-

A combination that fills us all.

A dark black rose with puffy white clouds.

Who would think of joining two such things?

1996 High School Poetry Contest
First Place Winner

Cornfield Review